redleaf®'s mission is simple: to produce and distribute bottled water that is good for people and good for the earth.

In keeping true to its mission to be the world's most environmentally friendly bottled water, redleaf® is bottled and shipped from a North American source; thereby, greatly reducing its carbon footprint. In addition, the company's business practices are sustainable and earth friendly.

The company has a 1:1 bottling ratio to ensure no water is wasted; surpassing the bottled water industry average of 6:1. Inside the earth-friendly bottling facility, an air driven line + blower is used. Recycled heat/air condition maintain facility temperature, and the plant is steam sterilized; meaning no chemicals are needed to clean the facility. The bottles are shipped using electric fork lifts on recyclable pallets. The company recycles waste products in the factory and provides recycled materials into local community.

redleaf® believes in making the world a better place, one sip at a time.
